Important Suggestions for Bringing Your New Dog Home

(Please KEEP and read this important article.)

The Important Adjustment Period

Give your new dog time to adjust to his/her new home. It takes dogs at least a month to feel comfortable and to show their true personality. In the meantime, it is very important to set house rules for your dog. Do not coddle and baby your shelter dog because you feel sorry for him/her. Not all shelter dogs were abused and neglected. Even if they were, coddling them does more damage than good. Coddling or petting a scared or growling dog actually praises the behavior the dog is showing at that moment - fear and or growling and aggression.

Do NOT let your new dog have free run of the house. Use a crate and treat the dog as if it were an 8-week-old puppy.

Do NOT let the dog up on your bed and the furniture. Some dogs perceive this as meaning they are at a higher status than you are. Some dogs will begin to challenge you for the bed and furniture.

Instead, be kind, gentle, and patient and set house rules for your new dog right from the start so he/she knows what to expect.

Basic Suggestions for When You First Arrive Home

1. If you have other dogs, leave them inside the house when you arrive. If you have a cat, it too should be in the house.
2. Leash walk your new dog outside for at least 10-15 minutes or until he relieves himself. Always keep your new pet on leash, even in a fenced yard. Let him get the "lay of the land" by sniffing and becoming acquainted with all the smells associated with your yard.
3. Your new dog will be nervous and excited when he first comes home. Therefore, withhold food and water until he begins to relax. Otherwise, the dog may vomit. It is better to offer a few cracked/chipped ice cubes instead of water. Nervous dogs have a tendency to drink too much water too quickly causing them to throw it up.

New Dog Meets Old Dog

The meeting between dogs may have gone wonderfully on the neutral turf of the shelter. On home turf, the reaction from either or both dogs may be different. This difference is because you are now bringing another dog into your current dog's home turf.

1. Meeting outside (preferably in a fenced yard) can be less threatening for canine introductions. Set it up so this can be done.
2. Both dogs must be on leash and wearing secure buckle collars, training collars or Gentle Leaders for better control during the introductions.
3. Introduce each dog one at a time. Do not force a confrontation! Give them time to approach each other on their own terms.
4. If there is any sign of hostility, remind the hostile dog in a firm tone "Be Nice". Keep the pressure OFF the leash. You must be matter of fact - not worried. YOU are in control and must be aware of their body language. Don't be concerned if they don't warm up to each other immediately. Give encouragement for good behavior. (Good -be nice.)

As hard as it may be, try not to be nervous yourself, or you will telegraph it to the dogs. Your dog may feel you are in need of being defended from the new dog or even visa versa.

If they engage in a fight, do not try to pull them apart with the leashes if the leashes have become entangled. Often times, the leashes become wrapped and all you end up doing is forcing them closer together. If that happens, drop one or both of the leashes so the dogs can move away from each other. Then grab the leashes again. The importance of doing introductions in a fenced area becomes obvious. If you have to drop the leashes, neither dog can escape the yard.

5. As each dog becomes comfortable with the other, you can drop the leashes (if in a fenced environment). Keep the leashes on so you can more easily grab one and make a “point” quickly if needed.
6. As the dogs come inside, you may find this tighter, more personal space will cause a squabble or two, so you may still want to leave the leashes on for quick control.

Introducing Your New Dog to Your Cat

1. You will need a more controlled environment to introduce your new dog to your cat. Do not introduce them the minute you get home. If you were told the dog gets along with cats, it doesn't mean your cat and new dog will instantly become friends. It takes time and it is your job to keep both of them safe. Do not push the interaction. Give them time.
2. Keep your dog on leash and have him meet the cat safely. It is ideal to put the dog or the cat into a crate and let them meet quietly - giving each food treats for quietness and calmness.

Being a dog, he will most likely only want to chase the cat if it runs, but occasionally, a stronger prey drive may make the dog more aggressive and the cat can get hurt. Again, speak to your dog to go easy and to be nice.

Don't ever unleash your dog around your cat until you feel very comfortable with their interactions. Until you are comfortable, don't leave the dog and cat alone unsupervised.

Meeting Family and Friends

1. New human introductions should also be made one at a time; preferably on leash for extra control should it be needed.
2. Let the dog take the initiative to greet the new person. Don't let people run up to the dog and force themselves on it. The dog may want to sniff the person first, before any petting is done. Be prepared because your dog might try to jump up on the new person. Just ask that person to step away until the dog sits. If the dog tries to jump up again, repeat until he sits. Do not pet the dog when it is jumping up. Have treats ready to reward for a nice sit - pass the treat to the friend so they can give the reward.
3. Take your cues from your new dog. How comfortable does he appear with all of this extra attention? Many dogs are real hams and love to be engulfed by people and attention -for them, the more the merrier with new people. Other dogs may be a bit overwhelmed with their new situation. Common sense should rule the day.
